The Use of Cement Pipe for Sewers.

The following veto was filed with City Clerk Deary yesterday afternoon:

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Bangor:

The following is one of four honorable body Friday evening, April 2, 1886, is hereby returned without my approval. Here is given at length the resolution adopted by the Council providing for a cement sewer in Albany street.

The sewerage of every city is a very important matter, both from a sanitary and financial standpoint. Every intelligent sewer engineer and engineers of different cities unanimously testifying to the superiority of the pipe, and stating that it is now universally used throughout the country.

Then why does the Council insist on putting down cement?

Some have charged that the people petition for it—there is some force in that I admit—but are they the only parties interested in this matter? When the sewers prove defective (as they are doing continually) the city, and not the people must find the bills.

And are we to pay no attention to the word that was uttered into our ears last fall about the sewer gas in the cellars and houses of our citizens? I think we should. If these evils are to be remedied the pipe for sewerage, and the dependent of their pockets in trying to maintain a system with inferior pipe.

This is too expensive and dangerous a monopoly for this Council to encourage or maintain.

Fourth Congressional District.

The undersigned, having been notified by the Secretary of the Navy to recommend a candidate for appointment as Naval Cadet, to fill the vacancy for the Fourth Congressional District of Maine, at the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., hereby announces that a competitive examination will be attended to any of the youth of the District who desire to compete for the nomination at a competitive examination to be held at Bangor, beginning at 10 o'clock A. M. Tuesday, June 22d, 1886, by a committee representing the different counties.

The Revised Statutes, Section 1517, provide:

"Candidates [for appointment as Naval Cadets] allowed for Congressional districts, for Territories, and for the District of Columbia, must be actual residents of the districts or territories respectively from which they are nominated. And all candidates must at the time of their examination for admission, be between the ages of fourteen and eighteen years, are physically sound, well-formed, and of robust constitution."

The candidate recommended by this examining committee will be again examined at the Academy for admission September 1, 1886.

Candidates will be required to furnish recommendations as to character and to submit to a thorough physical examination and evidence of feeble constitution, retarded development, chronic disease, impaired faculties, or impediment of speech will be sufficient cause for rejection. The minimum height will be five feet.

Candidates will be examined mentally in reading, writing, spelling, arithmetic, geography, English grammar, history, and algebra. All the examinations, except in reading, will be in writing. Proficiency in any one of those subjects will be sufficient to insure the rejection of a candidate. The person recommended by the examining committee as the best qualified will be recommended for appointment.

A candidate who successfully passes the September examination by the Academic Board will receive appointment as Naval Cadet and will be sworn an honor of the Academy. Each cadet will be required to sign articles by which he binds himself to serve in the United States Navy eight years (including his time of probation at the Naval Academy) unless sooner discharged. Of the graduates from the six years' course at the Naval Academy a limited number will be appointed to fill vacancies in the Navy each year. Surplus graduates who do not receive such appointments will be given a certificate of graduation, an honorable discharge and one year's sea pay as provided for Naval Cadets.

Those desiring to compete will please send to me, at Bangor, Maine, addressed to the office by June 18th, and on application by letter candidates will be furnished with more particular statement of the requirements.

Green peas, from a Lewiston man's garden, were in the market, Tuesday.

The fire caught by reason of a defective chimney, and would have been extinguished without loss if the well had not gone dry after a few pails of water had been taken out. The house was entirely consumed, but nearly all the household effects were saved. Sparks from the house set the barn on fire and it was burned to the ground, together with its contents, including farming tools, one hundred bushels of buckwheat, hay, etc. Thirty cords of dry wood piled up near the house was also destroyed. There was $1,000 insurance on the house and two barns.

Medicine Men.

WHO GENERALLY KILL.—PHYSICIANS WHO PRONOUNCE DEATH SENTENCES AND CARRY THEM OUT IN DIFFERENT WAYS—THE RATTLE.

The following interview with Sergeant Fred W. Fickett of the United States Signal Service, whose home is in Etna and who graduated at the Maine State College in the class of '86, appears in a late number of the Portland, Oregon, News:

Fred W. Fickett, one of the Copper river explorers, but now in the Signal Service office in this city, was explaining the "rattle," an instrument peculiar to the medicine men of Alaska, to some visitors, when a News reporter ventured in yesterday afternoon to inquire about the weather. The "rattle" is a hollow wooden instrument with a handle, and painted and designed according to the ingenuity of the maker. It contains a quantity of pebbles, or shot, and when shaken, causes a rattling noise, which gives it its name.

"The Indians of Alaska recognize no medicine," said Mr. Fickett. "They have this sort of an instrument, called a rattle, wielded by medicine men. They believe when a person becomes sick that an evil spirit takes possession of him. The first thing is to dislodge this bad spook. The medicine man is sent for, and after considerable entreaty and fees, in the way of skins, blankets, etc., is induced to visit the patient. He covers himself with all the grease, paint and dirt he can get hold of, surmounts his head with a feather, and generally makes himself as hideous as possible. Then the patient is laid on a blanket in the open air, and for hours the medicine man goes through the most horrible contortions, mingled with worse than war-whoops! Sometimes the disease spends itself and the patient recovers. But in nine cases out of ten, death ensues. The medicine man stays with the patient until he recovers or dies."

"What disease is most prevalent among the Alaska Indians?"

"Biliousness. It is caused by eating so much dried meat and fish. The Indians live on dried meat in summer, and a mixture of fish and meat in winter. They never cook their food, and consume it in its dried, raw state after dipping it in oil. When the food becomes too hard, they steam it to soften it, and that is about all the cooking they do. The children suffer terribly from sickness, and the mortality is large. So much so that not one child in ten ever reaches the age of maturity. It is impossible on such exclusive diet."

"Is much confidence placed in these medicine men by the Indians?"

"Every reliance is placed in them. If a medicine man tells a sick Indian that he will leave for the happy hunting grounds in half an hour, he believes it, and gives up all hope of recovery. In fact, the medicine men are masters of the situation, and are the cause of much trouble. They can pronounce even a death sentence. If they fail to cure a patient some one else is blamed for the failure, and if that person values his life he will soon make himself scarce. Once in northern Alaska a medicine man undertook to cure a child and failed. He claimed that an old Indian woman had bewitched him, and ordered her to be killed. At low tide she was tied to a stake and when the tide came in she was drowned. The officers of the United States steamship Pinta heard of the matter, and came to the scene and captured the medicine man. He was taken aboard and shorn of his hair and then released. That disgrace took him in the eyes of his people, which was worse than death. Like Samson, he was powerless without his long locks."

"We kept four or five dogs with us, and fed them on the scraps of our meals. In Alaska there are five runs of salmon, each two or three days apart. The first run was very small, and the second was late. The medicine man of the village declared that we were feeding our dogs with salmon, and that no more would come as long as we continued it. The Indians sat down on our supply immediately. The next day the run commenced, and the medicine man proclaimed the apparent truth of his prophesy in forcible terms. After that we had all the fish we desired."

"Another time I missed one of my instruments when the party was preparing to leave a village. I insisted on searching an Indian's hut for it, and in an instant there were sixty rifles leveled at our heads. I do not see why they didn't shoot for they are never known to stop at killing. I abandoned the search for the missing instrument."

"During the trip we came across a Russian half-breed who had been an interpreter for the Russian traders. He had a wife and a child. The child became ill and the Russian sent for the medicine man, although he had lived all his life with white folks. We expostulated with him, as we had medicine with us, and offered our services free. We gave the child some pills, and left some with the father, who promised to treat the child according to our directions, but I do not believe he ever did it. At length the medicine man came, but it took every bit of household goods, sk ns, dried meats, etc., that the half-breed possessed, to induce the doctor to attempt a cure. The child was taken into the open air on a cold August night, and laid on a blanket. The medicine man laid on the ground close to the child. Several Indians held another blanket above the two as shelter. Well, sir, for three hours that medicine man groaned, raved, struggled and went through all manner of contortions, but to no avail. Then he placed the child in a sitting posture in its father's lap. The medicine man's clumsy feet were placed on the child, and the tiny hands of the latter on the feet. For fully ten minutes the doctor trembled and groaned and then made an almost superhuman effort and arose from the ground with a wild cry that he had contracted the child's disease, and began to rid himself of it. In a few moments he fell to the ground exhausted, and was unable to stand. Every bit of clothing was torn from him in his struggles. However, the child died. We witnessed the weird scene, not daring to interfere for fear we would be denounced for having bewitched the medicine, and suffer the consequences of the superstitious doctor's wrath."

The Free Trade Bill Again Defeated.

It is said that experience is a hard but thorough teacher, and consequently there is some hope that Mr. Morrison may ere long be able to comprehend that the people of this country have no use for his free trade doctrines. Two years ago he inaugurated a raid upon the protective system in the introduction of his celebrated horizontal reduction bill. This measure aroused a most determined opposition among the people, so much so that a small fact on of the Democrats in the House were afraid to face it and, uniting with the Republicans, the bill was killed by striking out the enacting clause. This year, encouraged by the election of a Democratic President, who is in hearty sympathy with his free trade views, Mr. Morrison again came to the front with a bill the effect of which would be most disastrous to the future prosperity of this country. It was particularly severe on the State of Maine as every one of our important industries were to be offered as a sacrifice. Again the people hastened to Washington and pointed out the disaster that would follow the adoption of such a measure. The wage earners were especially outspoken in their condemnation of a bill calculated to degrade American labor and place it on a par with the pauper labor of foreign countries. The logic of the argument was unanswerable and in fact Mr. Morrison's committee made no effort to answer it. The Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee knew that the Democrats had a majority in the House and he relied upon the influence of the Administration to bring the hesitating members of the party into line. The President proved a willing, but ineffectual factor in the fight to cripple American enterprise. He first quietly gave his party in the House to understand that he favored the measure and finally threw off all disguise and labored personally to secure a passage of the bill, but his efforts were all wasted. Yesterday Mr. Morrison endeavored to carry out his scheme, but the House refused even to consider the bill, the vote standing yeas 140; nays 157. The free trade leader gave notice that he should renew his motion next week, to which Representative McKinley aptly replied that the opponents of the bill would be on hand. This practically kills the bill at this session. The action of the House is a humiliation to the Administration and it is to be hoped that Mr Morrison will be able to understand the significance of his second defeat which means that the people will not tolerate any free trade nonsense.

"Reform is Dead."

After witnessing the operations of the Administration for a little more than a year, the New York Herald plaintively remarks:

> The Times, Evening Post and Harper's Weekly are still discussing civil service reform. True, honest, effective and permanent civil service reform is dead. It died when Mr. Cleveland pulled down his curtains. We have no doubt that Mr. Cleveland will limp along as well as he can. He will make no improper appointments if he knows it, but he has carefully shut out the light and closed the door of knowledge against himself. His course has not fixed this necessary reform as he might have done. It has substantially left it where it always was, for it has been true at all times that any President could, if he wished, make a respectable civil service. We do not see that Mr. Cleveland is in this matter an improvement over Mr. Arthur.

During the campaign of 1884 the election of Mr Cleveland was urged solely upon the ground that he was a "reformer." Not even his most zealous advocate pretended that he was a statesman, or that he had any knowledge of public affairs, but all united in the reform chorus, pointing out the splendid record this man would make if given an opportunity to shape the policy of the Government. He secured the coveted position and has made his record, but what a record for an alleged reformer! Pledges broken; experienced and valuable officials removed to make room for pot house politicians and in not a few cases graduates of the penitentiary; old soldiers turned out of office to create vacancies for party hacks; the alleged extravagance in the administration of the Government increased rather than cut down as was promised; loyal men sent to the rear and ex-rebels given places of trust under the the Government they sought to destroy, and the President's official family involved in a scandal that has already necessitated an investigation by Congress.

The President has devoted nearly his whole time since elected to a consideration of the offices and instead of the reform that was predicted he has made a record that forces one of his most persistent advocates to lament: Reform is dead and Cleveland has killed it.

Disappointing the Enemy.

The Republicans are causing the Democrats no end of disappointment this year by the large and harmonious conventions. In this State for weeks previous to the Lewiston convention the Democratic organs did not permit a day to pass without calling attention to imaginary discord, which they predicted would result in an open rupture. The convention was one of the largest and most enthusiastic ever held in the State and the Republicans were never more united and vigorous than they are to-day. In Vermont it was also predicted that there was going to be the biggest kind of a row, and yet the convention nominated a State ticket without a ripple and adopted a ringing platform upon which the Republican candidates will be handsomely elected just as they will be in this State. If our friends the enemy are searching for discord they should not turn their eyes toward the Republican party, but look nearer home.

Stirring Its Own Party.

Having nominated the candidate and ground out this formidable list of resolves the next thing will be to start the circus of foreign speakers and get together the usual amount of bribe money.

The above paragraph appeared in the Belfast Age in an editorial on the Republican State Convention. If it means anything it means that the Age has no confidence in its own party, the members of which would seem to be in the market for the highest bidder. This is hardly a complimentary opinion of the Maine Democracy, coming as it does from a party organ.

The Portland Convention.

According to the report published elsewhere the Prohibition Convention at Portland nominated Aaron Clark of Buxton, for Governor, T B. Hussey of Berwick, for Congressman in the First District and Col. Eustis, the candidate for Governor two years ago, for Congressman in the Second District. No other nominations are reported. As no biographical sketch of the nominee for Governor has been sent out we are unable to say much about him at this time; but Mr. Bodwell, himself a practical prohibitionist, will receive the great bulk of the temperance vote and will be elected by a handsome majority. Two years ago Col. Eustis received 1,151 out of a total of 142,107 votes and it is not probable that Mr. Clark will find an equal number of citizens who are willing to sacrifice their votes this year.

Maine and the Morrison Bill.

[Portland Press.]

After dodging the question for some years the Argus appears to have come out flat-footed against protection and in favor of free trade. In a long and lugubrious article in yesterday's issue it paints in vivid colors the ruin brought in Maine by the protective tariff. Apparently it is of the opinion that had a western cyclone swept over the State the result would not have been so disastrous as that brought about by the tariff of 1860. As a matter of fact, however, this generally dilapidated condition of things which the Argus thinks it finds in Maine, exists only in its own melancholy imagination. If our contemporary will take the trouble to consult the statistics of the census it will find that there is no foundation for its gloom. Maine is prosperous, and has been for many years past. Whether its prosperity is due to the protective tariff or something else, may furnish ground for difference of opinion, but the fact of its prosperity cannot be successfully gainsaid.

Let the Argus turn back to the census of 1860 and contrast our condition as then exhibited with our condition shown twenty years later by the census of 1880. In 1860 our population was 628,179. In 1880 it was 648,936, not a large gain, but sufficient to prove the falsity of the Argus' statement that the protective tariff has depopulated the State. In 1860 the capital invested in manufactures in this State was $22,044 020. Twenty years later it had risen to $55,988,171. The number of persons employed in 1860 was 34,619. In 1880 it was 49,208. In 1860 the amount paid out in wages was $8,303,891, and the value of the products was $83,193,254. In 1880 the cost of labor had risen to $13,623,315, and the value of the product to $79,839,703. In 1860 the total deposits in our savings banks were $385,211,39. On the first of May 1886, there were $36,293,564.95.

Certainly these facts do not sustain the Argus' assertion that the State has been impoverished by the protective system. It would be easy to multiply statistics all pointing in the same direction, and showing that the State has steadily advanced in material wealth and prosperity since 1860, under the high tariff of that year. But these are enough to prove the ridiculous falsity of the Argus' assertion that it has been "depopulated and impoverished."

But the Argus says there has been a decline in ship building along our coast, that "old stumps of piles indicate a deserted ship yards" that the "wharves, that represent an old-time commerce, are clogged with ooze and green with grass." Undoubtedly there has been a decline in the building of ships for the foreign carrying trade, but that decline began before the protective tariff of 1860 was enacted, and was largely due to the invention of the iron ship, and the fact that England could engage in that kind of naval architecture to better advantage than any Nation on earth. Congressman Dingley has shown this to be the case over and over again, but the free trade paper steadily ignores it, and attributes it to the protective tariff.

But the shipbuilding industry is by no means so near extinction in Maine as the Argus would have us suppose. In 1860, according to the census, the number of shipbuilding establishments in this State was forty-six, the capital invested $568,780; the cost of material $821,702; the hands employed 1,021; the amount paid for labor $399,948 and the value of the product $1,137,814. In 1880 the capital employed was $811,755; the number of hands employed 1,997; amount paid for wages $833,355; value of materials $1,936,857 and the value of the product $2,909,846.

But what is the Argus remedy for the impoverished condition of the people which it assumes to exist. It is to pass the Morrison bill. The "impoverished" fishing industry is to be built up by taking off the tariff on fish, so that the American fishermen shall be brought into direct competition with the Canadian fishermen, who can get their vessels and outfit cheaper and hire his men at a lower price. How does that method of building up the fishing industry strike the men who are engaged in it? Then the "impoverished" agricultural industry is to be enriched by taking off the duty on hay and potatoes so as to give the Canadians a chance at our markets. How does that plan strike the farmer? Then the tax on lumber is to be taken off so that the product of Canadian forests can beat those of our own in our own markets. Of course that method of assisting the men who toil in our woods in winter and in our sawmills in summer strikes them favorably. Then what is left of the shipbuilding industry is to be fostered under another bill by admitting foreign built ships to American registry. These are the Democratic prescriptions for making the wilderness of Maine blossom like the rose, for bringing back population to our "depopulated" State, for enriching our "impoverished" industries.

Probable Deficit Next Year.

MR. HISCOCK'S STARTLING FIGURES.

[Washington Cor. N. Y. Tribune.]

Amazement and anger sat upon the gloomy faces of the Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee in the House Tuesday as Mr. Hiscock in the debate on the Legislative bill proceeded to show by official figures and estimates that the appropriations for the next fiscal year made, and to be made, plus the permanent appropriations on account of interest on the public debt, the amount required for the sinking fund, etc., will exceed the estimated revenues by about $14,000,000. Thus the Democratic Administration in its second year and without any reduction of taxation will be confronted with a deficit instead of a surplus of $30,000 000 as estimated in the report of the Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee accompanying the Tariff bill.

Mr. Hiscock stated that the aggregate amount of the appropriations as the appropriation bills now stood was $329 749,315. The amount carried by the Sundry Civil bill was $21,053,820. The Deficiency bill would exceed $6,500,000 and the Fortification bill would amount to $725,000. The addition to the Naval bill would be $3,000,000. The Miscellaneous Appropriations bill would amount to $2,000,000, and there would be requires to refund duties under the recent decision of the Supreme Court $10,000,000—the aggregate being $373,057,199. The estimated annual appropriations were $118,000,000, making a grand total of $391,968,154. The estimated receipts were only $330,000,000, while the postal revenue would amount to $47,000,000, making an aggregate of $377,000,000 and leaving a deficit for the next fiscal year of over $14,000,000.

Mr. Randall admitted that the figures presented by the gentleman from New York might be correct, but they were based upon the condition of the appropriation bills at this time, when some of the bills had not passed the House, some were pending in the Senate and some were in conference. But he was led to admonish the House and especially the Democratic side of the House, that it ought to follow closely the recommendation of every one of those committees and to keep the appropriations down to the lowest point. The condition was not one of apprehension, but it was one that compelled and demanded the utmost caution on the part of the Democratic side of the House to see that not one unnecessary dollar was appropriated in any of the annual appropriation bills.

MAINE NEWS.

THE PROHIBITIONISTS.

Aaron Clark, of Buxton, Nominated for Governor, and W. T. Eustis and T. B. Hussey for Congress.

PORTLAND, June 17. The Prohibition convention opened this morning with a prayer meeting led by Rev. O. P. Shinn. The convention proper was called to order by Rev. Mr. Larks of Presque Isle. The temporary organization was made permanent The following Vice Presidents were chosen

Aroostook—Eben Hill, Monticello; Androscoggin—A. Berry, Lewiston; Cumberland—Peter Graham, Saccarappa; Franklin—Chester Greenwood, Farmington; Kennebec—W. Hatch, Readfield; Knox—J. B. Lowry, Knox; Lincoln—P. McBunnigle, Dresden; Oxford—C. F. Hovey Waterford, Penobscot—Volney B. Cushing, Bangor; Piscataquis—C. H. Leeland, Sangerville; Sagadahoc—Reuben S. Hunt, Bath; Somerset—A. C. Dinsmore, Bingham; Waldo—Rev. B. C. Wentworth, Belfast York—Amos Clark, Buxton.

The Committee on Credentials reported present 191 delegates from 66 cities and towns and 14 counties.

Second District Convention.

During the recess of the convention, the Second District held a District Convention in the corner of the hall to nominate a candidate for Congress. W. W. Perry, of Camden, presented the name of J. B. Lawry, of Rockland, Jordan Rand, of Lisbon, presented the name of R. S. Hunt, of Bath, Mr. Wetherbee, of Bath, presented the name of Col W. T. Eustis, of Dixfield. The names of Lawry and Hunt were withdrawn. Speeches in favor of Nelson Dingley were made by Mr. Small, Livermore and others. Col. Eustis pledged his support to the prohibition movement. He said that Dingley was in bad company. I. G. Burden said that Dingley had tried to break down the Prohibition party through his paper. the Lewiston Journal. A motion to nominate Col. Eustis was carried.

The Resolutions.

The convention proper was called to order again and Rev. Dr. Bashford reported the following resolutions which were adopted:

We, the Prohibitionists of Maine, acknowledging the Almighty God as the rightful ruler of the world from whom all just powers of government are derived, to whose laws all human enactments should conform and to whom we look for help in our battle against unrighteousness, appeal to the voters of Maine upon the following declaration:

We express our gratitude to God for the progress thus far made in this reform and we tender thanks to the citizens of Maine, including the W. C. T. U., who aided in securing constitutional prohibition of the liquor traffic. The temperance text books in our schools and such laws against the sale of alcoholic beverages as we now possess, the impressions of thousands of candid observers in every part of the St te, the records of our courts, the deposits in the savings banks of Maine as compared with other States; the small proportion of taxes collected by the United States authorities for the sale of liquor in Maine, the total destruction of the manufacture of alcoholic drinks in the State and the vast increase of sentiment in favor of total abstinence may fairly show that Maine leads in this reform and is a quarter of a century ahead of the license States.

The platform then goes on to affirm that both the old parties contain a new element which will not allow the enforcement of the Prohibitory law and that such law ought to be enforced while it is part of the organized law of the State. In the principles of the party there is no impartial enforcement of the law. The Republican party regards the work thus far accomplished as its utmost effort for prohibition The Republican party is afraid to enforce the law. A vote for prohibition is not simply local but its influence will be wide and will encourage States now struggling for prohibition. We aim at an application of Christian principles to politics to do away with vituperation in political contests, the abolition of polygamy, a better condition of the Indians and of the colored people at the South.

Congressman for First District.

At a meeting of the Prohibitionists of the First District, T. B. Hussey, of North Berwick, was nominated for Congress.

For Governor, Aaron Clark.

Aaron Clark of Buxton, was nominated by acclamation for Governor. The convention closed his evening with a ratification meeting at which several addresses were made.

FORTY-NINTH CONGRESS.—1st Session.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, June 17. In the Senate this morning Mr. Ingalls offered a resolution requesting the President, if in his opinion not incompatible with public interest, to furnish the Senate information as to appointments and removals of clerks embraced within the provisions of the civil service act of Jan. 16th, 1883; also of chief clerks and chiefs of divisions.

On suggestion of Mr. Cockrell, who wanted to amend and enlarge the scope of the resolution, it was laid over one day. The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of the bills on the calendar under the five minute limitation of debate.

Among the bills passed was one to pay to the representative of the Government of Great Britain, $15,000 to enable that government to indemnify the owners of the British bark Chance for abandoning a whaling voyage in the Arctic ocean in 1871 and rescuing 96 American seamen from shipwreck in the ice.

Mr. Frye explained that the action of this bark was most humane and creditable. Having heard that American vessels were so placed as to involve the destruction of all hands if not speedily relieved, the bark promptly abandoned its own business for the season and went to the rescue of the Americans. Mr. Frye thought it a shame that this claim had for so many years been before Congress without passing.

Among other bills passed was one appropriating $35,000 for the completion of the public building at Concord, N. H., also a bill to promote the political progress and commercial prosperity of the American nation. The bill Mr. Frye's introducing the President of the United States to invite, on behalf of the people of the United States, delegates from Mexico, Central and South America to meet in Washington October 1st, 1887, to meet delegates on the part of the United States to consider such questions and recommend such measures as shall be to the mutual interest and common welfare of the American States.

The legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill was received from the House and was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

At 6 15 the Senate adjourned.

House.

At 1 30 Mr. Morrison moved that the House go into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of the tariff bill. The yeas and nays were ordered unanimously and the motion was defeated, yeas 146, nays 157.

The New England Representatives all voted with the majority.

The roll call was without great interest both on the floor and in the galleries

When the result of the vote was announced there was a storm of applause from the Republican side, which the Democrats returned with hearty good will when Mr. Morrison gave notice that he would renew the motion Tuesday next.

Mr. McKinley gave notice that the opponents of the bill would try to be present on that day.

The House at 2 o'clock went into committee on the Naval Appropriation bill.

Mr. Herbert explained that the bill appropriated for the next fiscal year $11,849,838, while the aggregate of appropriations for the current year was $15,029,704.

Mr. Hepburn, of Iowa, made a speech in reply to that of Mr. Wheeler, of Alabama, relative to Edwin M. Stanton, and then the committee rose and the House adjourned.

THE PRISCILLA WINS AGAIN.

Another Yacht Race Without Wind.

NEW YORK, June 17. The regatta of the New York Yacht Club to-day was a repetition of Tuesday's race, in that the wind was very light and it was impossible to correctly judge the respective merits of the fleet asleep. The Priscilla again proved herself to be a great boat in windless weather, but what she can do in a fair breeze was not at all demonstrated. The Priscilla was first across [illegible] 2 p. m. THE WEBSTER STATUE.

Imposing Inauguration Ceremonies at Concord, N. H.

A Large and Distinguished Assemblage Present.

CONCORD, N. H., June 17. It is estimated that there are 30,000 people in Concord to-day to witness the dedicatory exercises of the Webster statue. Gov. Robinson, of Massachusetts, and staff, and Gov. Hill, of New York, arrived early in special trains.

A large number of distinguished guests are present, including United States Senators, Congressmen, Governors of various New England States, including Gov. Robie, of Maine, and members of his staff, Judges and ex-Judges of the Supreme and other State Courts, ex-Congressmen and men prominent in legal, military and civic positions in New England. The procession was most imposing.

The great procession started promptly at noon and after traversing the principal streets drew up in front of the State House where the statue stands and where the literary exercises took place.

Governor Marston opened the literary exercises, introducing Judge George W. Nesmith, who spoke eloquently on assuming the chair.

Presentation of the Statue.

Benjamin P. Cheney presented the statue to the State in the following address:

Your Excellency: I am happy at the fulfilment of an intention which I have long cherished, of presenting to my native State a statue of Daniel Webster.

I trust that it may be received by you in behalf of the people whose political rights are entrusted to your care, as an appropriate tribute to the memory of a son of New Hampshire, who, as a patriot was unexcelled, and as an orator and a statesman was without a peer.

I now deliver to your Excellency the conveyance of the statue to the State, executed by the trustees having the matter in charge

The Deed to Trust.

He then delivered the following deed to Governor Currier:

By virtue of a deed of trust, a copy of which is hereto annexed, executed by and between Benjamin Pierce Cheney and the trustees therein named, dated February 13 1885, the undersigned as such trustees, hereby convey to the State of New Hampshire the bronze statue of Daniel Webster this day dedicated on the State House grounds, in Concord, subject to all the provisions of said deed of trust.

Witness—BENJAMIN P. PIERCE CHENEY.
Dated Concord, N. H., June 17, 1886.

Letter from President Cleveland.

The following letter from President Cleveland was then read:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, D. C. June 12, 1886.

Hon. Moody Currier, Governor of New Hampshire:

Dear Sir. I regret that pressing official duties will not permit me to be present at the exercises attending the unveiling of the statute of Daniel Webster at Concord on Thursday next. By occasion which does honor to this illustrious statesman is of extraordinary interest to all American citizens, since our pride in his career and achievements is not in the least limited by partisan influence or by any sentiment less than national. It would be well if in the capital of every State there stood a statue such as Concord boasts which should not only preserve the memory of a man, but which should also keep alive through coming generations the love and veneration of the American people for true American greatness.

Yours truly,
(Signed) GROVER CLEVELAND.

Governor Currier received the statue on behalf of the State in an appropriate speech At the conclusion of Gov. Currier's address the orator of the day. Rev. Samue C. Bartlett, President of Dartmouth College, delivered his oration, which was long, able and eloquent. This was followed by an original ode by Wm. C Shephard, of North Scituate, Mass.

Governor Robinson was then introduced and spoke pleasantly of Massachusetts' delight to join New Hampshire in paying tribute to Webster, for a grander monument than this, he said, not reared with human hands, stands to testify to his public work and services. Words on every inch of soil in this great republic of the United States of America. It is the shrine of union and liberty. Consecrated by his abilities and power and sanctified anew in the heroism and blood of sons who perilled all, the liberty should survive and the Union endure.

Gov. Hill of New York, was then introduced and spoke at some length.

The President then said: The Chief Magistrate of the State of Maine is here to do honor to Webster and I will introduce His Excellency Gov. Robie. (Applause.)

Governor Robie' Speech.

Gov. Robie said: I thank you very much for this cordial greeting. I am aware that it is not personal in its character, but is largely due to the fact I am here to-day to represent Maine, and I am glad to be here and equally glad to join in these interesting exercises. I bear with me the wishes, good will and congratulations of the people of the State which I represent for what you have done in honor of that great man, Daniel Webster. I have not the honor of being a son of New Hampshire, but on reflection I find I am a grandson. (Applause.)

My father was born here in 1782, the very year that gave birth to that great statesman Daniel Webster and he was his friend, his political friend and his great admirer.

I recollect well my earliest view of Daniel Webster, which was looking at a cheap portrait which my father for some fifty years had hanging in his library. It remains there to-day and I am glad to notice here in this beautiful city, under the shadow of your churches and schools and in front of your capitol there stands Daniel Webster. (Applause.) Thorwaldsen Angelo once made a great statute of Moses, and when he had finished it he said it was so complete and life like that he walked up and said "speak or I will break you into a thousand pieces," and that statue has lived centuries and speaks in favor of the man who made it; and this statue will remain and speak in language which perhaps we cannot understand, because it was silent, but still speaks. It speaks for the great Nation for which he was an advocate. It speaks for liberty and constitutional law. It is the representative of the civil zation of New England and speaks for that land may it stand and may it forever speak to the people of New Hampshire, to the men of Maine and to the people of this Nation and the people of the civilized world, of the principles he advocated and of which he was the great exponent.

Gov. Pingree, of Vermont, followed with a brief address and was in turn succeeded by Hon. John A. Bingham, of Ohio. Despatches of a congratulatory nature and sympathy with the object of the gathering were received from the Bunker Hill Monument Association, Hon. S. J. Tilden and others

The Alumni Dinner.

At the close of the exercises at the statue the alumni dinner was held, Judge Wilbridge A. Field, of Boston presiding.

Hon. Mellen Chamberlain of Boston was introduced as the orator of the occasion. Hon. G. A. Marden was elected toast master and among the responders were President Bartlett, of the College, Ex-Gov. B. F Prescott, of Epping, Hon. E. C. Carrigan of Boston, Ex Senator J. W. Patterson, of Hanover, Col. J. N. George, Capt. H B Atherton, of Nashua, and Geo. Philip Carpenter of New York. The gathering was the largest ever held by the Alumni.

THE FISHERY QUESTION.

Canada Withdraws Her Obnoxious Instructions.

The Question Narrowed to the Three Mile Limit.

CHICAGO, June 17. The Daily News' Montreal special says the Dominion government has changed its policy in the fisheries question, having issued instructions to cruisers and collectors of customs cancelling former instructions regarding the seizure of American vessels for contravention of treaty. In this last circular no mention is made regarding the purchase of bait, the transshipping of cargo or the shipping of men as being contrary to the treaty. The question therefore appears to be narrowed to the three mile limit This move is said to be in deference to the wishes of the Imperial government for a conciliatory enforcement of the treaty, in the hope of a speedy appointment of a commission.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Gladstone Goes to Scotland—A Splendid Ovation.

LONDON, June 17. Gladstone started this morning at 11 on his Scotch campaign. He was accompanied by Mrs. Gladstone. Thousands of people congregated at the railway station to witness his departure. The crowd was simply enormous. It seriously blocked and delayed the approach of the Premier's carriage. When Gladstone finally succeeded in reaching the station platform he found it packed with people who welcomed him with enthusiastic cheers. At last he reached his seat in the special coach assigned for his conveyance. The window at his seat was open. When the crowd saw him through the window it set up another cheer, which was repeated several times.

The people appeared desirous of having the Premier address them with some parting words before going away on his arduous errand. He arose and spoke briefly from the coach window.

Gladstone then bade his hearers good bye and the train moved away. Enthusiastic and prolonged cheering accompanied its departure and hundreds of people waving handkerchiefs and hats and God speeding the Premier ran along the platform beside his coach until the train outspeed them.

The Ovations Continue Along the Route.

At Luton and Bedford crowds of people were at the station and cheered Gladstone as the train sped by. No stop was made until Leicester was reached. Here was an enormous gathering which gave the Premier an enthusiastic greeting and Gladstone spoke briefly. Along the route the crowds were tremendous and addresses and flowers were presented the Premier at every station. At Galastriel the crowd was more vociferous than at any other point and Gladstone was conducted from the train to the platform, where he was presented with an address.

Yesterday afternoon a pair of horses attached to a large cart and belonging to Sherman Smith of Charleston were standing at the westerly end of the freight side of the Maine Central depot, when suddenly they became frightened at escaping steam from a locomotive and started to run. As they started a brakeman named Israel Gullison jumped aboard the team to try and stop the runaways. But their speed was too great and they ran without causing any damage until in front of Dole & Fogg's mill, when one of the forward wheels caught on an upright switch arrangement. The shock of the collision flattened both horses, one being unable to get up without assistance, while it broke the cart. The brakeman who was riding was thrown into the air and turned a complete somersault and landed on his feet in the most unconcerned manner and astonished the lookers on who expected to see him badly injured. One horse was hurt and the harness broken. The runaway caused very much excitement

MILITARY MATTERS.

The Line Officers Meet in Bangor—Captain James F. Maloney, of the Jameson Guards, Elected Lieutenant Colonel—The Other Proceedings.

The long deferred election of a Lieutenant Colonel of the Second Maine Regiment to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Lieut. Col N. C. Stowe of Dover, occurred in this city yesterday afternoon. The line officers were nearly all in the city in the forenoon and appeared on the streets in their fatigue uniforms. In the afternoon at three o'clock they met at the Regimental headquarters and Col. Mitchell called them to order and adjourned the meeting to the Jameson Guards armory. Here Col. Mitchell presided, the following line officers being present:

Co. A, Hampden—Capt. W. W. Emerson.
Co. B, Old Town—Capt. R. H. Wing and Lieutenants J. F. Harris and E. D Shirland.
Co. C, Dexter—Capt. D. W. McCillis and Lieutenants E E. Hale and C. C. Libby.
Co. D, Lewiston—Capt. W. A. Goss and Lieutenants C. O. Mortill and J. A. Scott.
Co. E, Skowhegan—Capt. H. M. Weston and Lieutenant Frank S. Moses.
Co. F, Dover—Capt. J. B. Peaks and Lieut. W. T. Pollard.
Co. G, Bangor—Capt. J. F. Maloney and Lieut. J. F. Ford.
Co. H, Waterville, Capt. William Vaughan and Lieut. A. T. Shurtleff.

The officers took several informal ballots, but were unable to arrive at any conclusion, five or six different officers being voted for. Finally Col. Mitchell ordered the formal vote and on the second ballot Capt. James F. Maloney of the Jameson Guards, of this city, was chosen Lieutenant Colonel. After the election the officers discussed a proposition to purchase new uniforms for the building of a flight of steps up the mountain, it being the intention to make the ascent as easily as possible. The stairs go up the westerly side of the mountain and there is a buckboard road leading to the foot of them. The driveway to Pebbly Beach which was so popular last summer has been continued and the road now turns and comes back to Kinco by way of the Indian settlement. This makes a pleasant drive of about three miles which will no doubt be appreciated by the sojourners at this beautiful inland resort.

A Blonde Wig.

OR THE WHIMS OF A FATHER AND DAUGHTER.

BY FRANCIS FOOTE.

[Written for the Saturday Traveller.]

During my college years my father gave me a magnificent allowance, and, after I had been graduated he presented me with five thousand dollars, saying "go abroad for six months before settling down to business, Frank, for go to work you must, and what is more, you must get your position on your own responsibility. I have given you a liberal educat on, and can do no more for you. I started out with ten dollars, and Colburn's arithmetic at my finger tips, and if Harvard and five thousand can't do as much for you, you have my sympathy, but not another cent."

My father's parting words disturbed me continually. Indeed, I cut short my European trip, and returned home with two thousand dollars payable to my account, that I might not forego the luxuries to which I had been accustomed while looking for a position among my father's many friends.

It would be a waste of time for me to describe my many unsuccessful experiences. Day after day I received the same answer. "Would be glad to please your father's son, but any position you would take happens to be filled and then you have no experience and little capital. It is very praiseworthy in you to start out, without help from your father, but I fear you will not succeed as you would where he to back you." Day after day my little bank account dwindled away, and evening after evening I posed as the society man, without a care in the world beyond flirtations and irreproachable costumes.

I had seen my father but once since my return—then he had said to me, "Now, Frank, we will see what you are made of. You will have my money when I die, but until then you'll work for your living. Don't be proud. Be a clerk in a counting room, if your languages and metaphysics haven't fitted you for anything else. I heard of you the other night at a german. You'll have to give those things up if you don't earn enough money a day for the flowers you used to send, wont you? But never mind, it's discipline for you."

I left his office bitterly angry. Why had he brought me up in luxury only to cast me off without a cent? I was no more to him than his office boy, perhaps not so much, for he would not under any consideration give me the three dollars a week which he paid to that young gamin.

During the last few years I had written more or less poetry, which had been hailed with delight by those worthy men, the editors of the college papers. It usually contained a dash of positivism, a flavor of pessimism, with many enigmatical illusions, in accordance with the prevalent style. As I read over a number of these poems which had never seen the light, I looked on them as very neat productions.

Perhaps I could succeed as a litérateur. I had heard several of the most literary men in my class tell of the difficulty with which they had prevailed upon editors to read their MSS., and how often after reading they had returned them with a printed circular. Before I dropped any of my precious poems into the editorial whirlpool, never to be seen again unless some of the most terrible should be unsuposed into an original leader by the editor himself, I would try the effect of a little scheme.

I selected a short unfamiliar poem of Wordsworth's and sent it to a prominent daily paper, with my name and address. In a week's time it was returned to me with a note saying "the descriptive portions were fresh and pleasing, but the subject was uninteresting, and there was lack of unity in the finish." To this in was clear to me that without a patron I could do nothing unless it were purely physical labor—a dollar a day in return for the sweat of my brow. I looked at my large, lazy, white hands and shuddered, then filled my pipe and picked up the "Lady of Lyons," to be sure of my part for the last time, for that evening. I was to make my debut on the amateur stage as Melnotte. I wondered then why amateurs always chose that particular drama, and still more why my own club had cast me for that prominent part; still it was flattering, and I made up my mind to be a success if possible, and it might make an opening for me as a professional, if nothing else came up. Now I have dark brown hair, thick and curly, with eyes and moustache a shade darker, but on that night the man whom we had engaged to make us up, insisted that I should shave my moustache and wear a blonde curly wig; assuring me that all the former Melnottes had worn light hair, had dark melting eyes, and a smooth face. The allusion to my eyes carried the day, and I was a changed man in a very short space of time.

The performance passed off beautifully. I fairly outdid myself, spurred on by the attention of a young lady in the front row of the audience, who, together with an old gentleman at her side, watched me closely. During one of my impassioned speeches I gazed at her intently and she blushed a pale sweet pink, turning away just as the old gentleman whispered something in her ear, and rubbed his hands gleefully. He then levelled his glasses coolly at me for fully five minutes, after which he spoke again to the young lady, evidently urging her to survey me in the same manner, but she vehemently refused, blushing more deeply.

In a few minutes he replaced the glasses in the case, still continuing to watch me, however, in a way which almost caused me to forget my lines.

At the close of the play a card was given to me bearing the name Hon. J. B. Jackson, with a few words written in pencil below, asking permission to see me directly on important business.

I told the boy to let the gentleman come directly to the green room, where I was wiping the rouge from my cheeks, and before I could change my costume the little old gentleman of the front row appeared.

"Mr. Fielding, I believe," he said, "my card gave me the necessary introduction. Your acting was a fine bit of impersonation. Gad, sir, you are a Forrest, Jr. Was it Forrest or Fechter who used to excel in the part? Even my daughter noticed you, and now I am coming gradually to my business with you. Nothing like leading up to a point by degrees, is there?" And he laughed a dismal laugh, similar to the croak of a raven. In fact he reminded me strongly of that lugubrious bird, for during his speech I had plenty of time to examine him closely. He was very dark and withered, with round bead eyes, and a long hooked nose, and a habit of flapping his loose black coat sleeves when he talked, as if were spreading his wings to fly.

"Oh, sir," he continued, "I am a peculiarman. I have hobbies, and I ride them full canter. You, to-night, can make or mar my strongest wish in life. What is your business?"

"I have just been graduated from college," I replied, "and have not as yet decided what to do."

"Elegant, capital," he croaked. "I had a presentiment when I saw you that you were the man. The gout in my left knee never goes back on me, never. Now, young man, you are a stranger to me, but I have an offer to make you. How would you like to go into business with me at a salary of two thousand a year, with the prospect of being taken into the firm when —ahem—when things turn out as I want them? You know the firm, Jackson, Johnson & Co., brokers, a sure thing."

Yes, I knew them well, and my face must have expressed some of the astonishment with which his proposition filled me, for he said immediately, "Lord bless your soul, man, I am not a philanthropist, that I offer you this out of kindness. There is to be a bargain aground. Now just listen to me and calm yourself. I have a daughter—you saw her to-night—who takes after her father, and rides hobbies. Now she has always declared that she will never marry a light-haired young man in fact she will seldom be introduced to one. I say she shall marry a light-haired young man or none at all. On this point we quarrel continually, and lately there has been much cause for anxiety on my part, for she is actually falling in love with a Cuban, Mr. Del Tosso. Marry him she shall not, and you are to be the go-between, catspaw. You will meet her, use every effort to win her interest, if possible her love—I don't care about the latter, however, as she is all I have. Any way, you are to play the devoted to her, keep all dark-haired men away, and prevent her from falling in love with one. As long as you can do this, you have the position with the salary, and if she will finally consent to marry you, and you are worthy of her hand, you come into the firm."

"But, my dear sir," I commenced, "my hair is not light," and I put up my hand to my brown curls, and found instead that blonde wig.

"Well, it is not tow," said the Hon. Mr. Jackson, reflectively, "still it will do, and now I will give you until to-morrow to think of the offer; then call at the office and we will arrange any final matters. Good evening," and he hopped out waving his gouty knee in the doorway as he turned to bestow a bird-like glance on my yellow curls.

After he had gone, I began mechanically to change my costume and finish off the paint and powder, repeating to myself all the while, "two thousand dollars for a blonde head of hair."

I had gotten into my great coat, and was looking for my derby when I suddenly thought that I had not removed my wig. I gazed at myself in the glass. It really was a most natural one, and fitted perfectly. Until then it had never entered my head to accept the offer under false colors. Now it did not seem as if it could in any one if I were to do it. The man could well afford the money, and it must either be that or a mere six dollars a week for me. The girl would probably dislike me any way, so it would not be for long. I would confess as soon as I could be sure of some other position. To be brief, I bought the wig of the costumer and went to my room in a more excited frame of mind than I ever care to be again.

There is a spice of romance about it all, too, I thought, as I entered the house. The girl is pretty and attractive, well worth trying for against such odds, and if she would only fall in love with me, why I could take her into the secret, we would marry, and then her father would forgive us.

I awoke in the middle of an interesting dream, with a most perplexing question, what would my friends say when they saw the sudden change? I pondered over it for some time, and at last decided that it had run the risk. At the office I should only be recognized by one whom I knew well, and as I had never seen the young lady in society, I was pretty sure that at the house I should be safe from my friends. I would have to give up my own set to a certain extent, but when I went among them it would be very easy to remove the wig for a few hours. My lucky star was in the ascendant when Mr. Jackson offered to become my patron; sure yet would not desert me now, and with it a comfortable conviction I fell asleep. Early the next morning I was on my way to Chapman, Jackson's office. With my seal of lar turned up and my hat pulled down, I cancied that an intimate friend would scarcely notice my bleached locks.

I found my employer or "prospective partner," as I already called him, writing busily, but upon seeing me he arose and grasped my hand effusively saying, "Ah, you have come. I'm so confident of you that I told Helen I should bring company to dinner."

"Mr. Wiggin," beckoning to a tall, sallow gentleman, "this is Mr. Fielding, an old friend of mine," (winking both beady eyes at me behind Mr. Wiggin's back), "whom I have taken into the office. Mr. Fielding, Mr. Wiggin, my head broker. You will show him what his work will be, Mr. Wiggin, and you may come here for me at six o'clock, Mr. Fielding," he insisted, waving one hand in dismissal. "Your hours are over at four."

At quarter past six I was seated with Mr. Jackson in his coupe, and in a short time the coachman drew up before a handsome house on ——th street. I can hardly describe to you my sensations as we entered a dimly-lighted reception room, hung with gray yellow portieres, and furnished in a picturesque style, partly early English and partly original. Mr. Jackson excused himself to call his daughter, and I stood in a chair by a large jardiniere filled with yellow roses. I was wondering in a dull sort of way if the Cuban admirer of the daughter had sent her the flowers, when I heard my own name and was being presented to Miss Jackson. As our eyes met she made a little gesture of annoyance, saying, "I was not aware, papa, that your new protege was the hero of the play last evening. Any woman dislikes to be surprised, you know," turning to me with a faint smile.

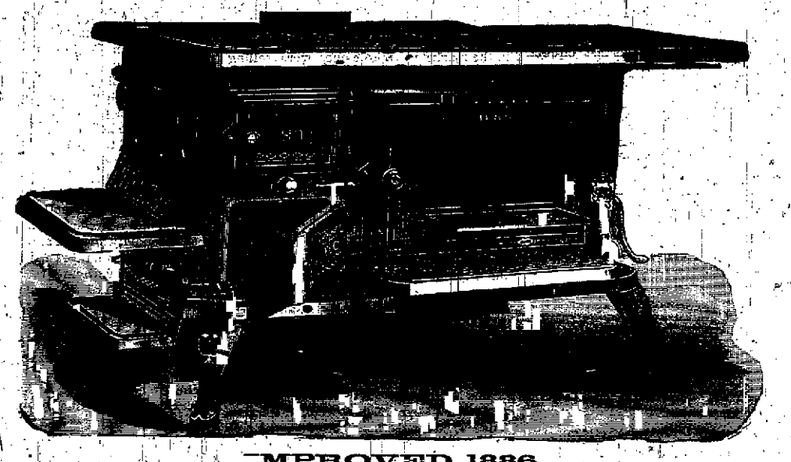
ROYAL CLARION COOKING RANGE.



IMPROVED 1886.

Wicket Oven Door with Pedal Attachment and Perfect Ventilation Secured with Fresh Air from Outside.

These valuable improvements can be applied to all Royal Clarion Ranges.

The Pedal is so arranged that the oven door can be thrown open with a slight touch of the foot, saving the use of hand or holder (as the door knobs are always hot). The Wicket Door is made to drop, and forms a shelf (as seen in the above cut). This Wicket Door will be found useful in the process of baking or roasting to open and see how the work is being done without detriment to the article being cooked, and in roasting, basting can be done without cooling the oven to any perceptible degree. The ventilation at the top of the oven door, in connection with the oven ventilator at the top of side of oven, as applied to our Royal Clarion, makes a completely ventilated oven, and for practical use the most perfect baking oven known to man. The production of 1886, with our many improvements, make the Royal Clarion Ranges the most desirable ever put upon the market.
